BEHIND THE SCENES IN HISTORIC HATTIESBURG SELF-DUNN HOUSE RESTORATION

Perseverance pays off. Every passerby of 901 North Main Street has no doubt of that. The colonial revival home with beaming white columns stands as testimony to the continued efforts of Walt Coker and his family. It offers us an example of what restoration and innovation can give to a community--a community which time and time again abandoned this piece of property, as it did an unfortunate number of others, to the fate of demolition by neglect.

The house itself has persevered. Originally built in the 1890's by the Self Family as a bungalow (small photo), this homestead was established on a small lot of land purchased from Mr. Hardy. It was located on the corner of 610 acres that soon would be divided by the railroad.

After a couple of fires and a couple of owners, R. W. Dunn purchased the home in the early 1920's. Mrs. Dunn set out to make it the colonial revival home of her dreams that stands there today (large photo). The transformation was completed in the early 1930's.

Some Hattiesburg residents know the home as The Brock Furniture House, opened in the 1980's by George Brock. At the height of his business, the home contained four apartments, and a cabinet shop.

After leaving his position as Executive Director of The Good Samaritan Center in 1993, Walt's perseverance was born with a challenge, "You can't fix this house and raise two kids." This was a legitimate, considerate statement made to a family that had to step down to the ground to traverse the expanse of the kitchen. The family's version of a house warming party consisted of putting the grill on the ground in the kitchen, with family and friends seated around on the floor with their feet on the ground--a rather absurd version of a summer picnic at the lake seated on a dock with your feet in the water!

As we begin to think about the various upcoming Holidays, my thoughts turn to Thanksgiving. Thank you, thank you, to all our volunteers, members, and donors. Without our volunteers the museum would not be able to remain open.

Most of you know that HAHS operates without any paid staff. Thanks Laurie, Tat, Jeanne, and Earline, for always being there and keeping our doors open to the public. Thanks Ursula for providing interesting exhibits in the museum room and Barbara for helping us with the finances. Also, thanks to the City of Hattiesburg for providing us a place to house our museum.

Our only funding is from our members' dues and contributions. Without your help the HAHS would not be able to continue its service to the community.

Please mark your calendar and join us for fun and fellowship at our annual membership meeting on Saturday, January 8, 2005, at the Phillip's Camp from 2 - 5 p.m. For further information and directions call the museum during office hours.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN HISTORIC HATTIESBURG- The Self-Dunn House Restoration

Yet the family endured and a home soon surrounded them. Windows, doors, and their frames would simply fall off the house as renovations began. Even an exterior wall began to give under the weight of the upper floors. As quick with a 4 x 4 beam as with hammer and nail, Walt shored up the structure, the floors, interior walls, and soon the neighborhood. With existing materials, and materials found in places one might not think contained items that make a home, this family continued recreating a piece of what once was in innovative ways. Corner shelving, pieced together cabinets, and salvaged flooring are but a few of the imaginative ideas that revived the structure. Walt, with two sons in tow and the aid of friends, has restored the home almost to the exact version of Mrs. Dunn's dream offering back to the community a cornerstone of the North Main Street Historical District.

Over a seven year period trashed bottles from under the house captured a history in glass, the concrete parking lot in the front yard gave way to flower beds, and Italian cypress completed the home's signature landscaping. Then as if awards were not due, the second story caught fire sending heat and soot throughout the first floor, damaging the many items that were missed by Walt's frantic hands as he tried to save what he could. However, rehanging his original paintings in frames battered from landing in the yard, driveway and front porch, Walt took every cent of his insurance and continued. What emerged was a shining example of a man's, a family's, and a neighborhood's spirit of perseverance reminiscent of the spirit that created Hattiesburg.

UV PROTECTION NOW INSTALLED

Dr. William B. Thompson, Vice President of the Hattiesburg High School Class of 1951, recently notified HAHS of the class's decision to have no more formal reunions. As a result the HAHS became the recipient of the remaining class funds. This large cash donation enabled us to purchase the much needed UV film to cover the light panels in our exhibit room office, and archives. With the help of volunteers Ursula Jones, Jeanne Herring, Earline Roseberry, Jeanne Tutor, Laurie Crowson, Pam Boor, Molly Graf and Melissa Jones, the material has been installed. We are grateful for the generosity of the HHS Class of 1951 in helping protect our collection.
